

The Alchemists Clock (The Historians Archives Book 1)

Lia Caglione is a witch of no consequence and that's the way she likes it. In fact, if it weren't for her bizarre family occasionally throwing her life into upheaval, she'd happily spend her days teaching ballet at the local dance studio. But something's disrupting her ordinary life: strange dreams of patchwork streets and a crumbling clock tower that sings and a voice begging her for help. Sebastian Jaeger, the twelfth and youngest of Times Hours is the closest creature to human that an Hour can get, so when a young woman begins to sporadically appear and disappear on the streets of Sanctuary, Times' impenetrable city, it's his job to figure out how and why. Meanwhile, the Alchemists' clock looms on the skyline, its constant chime assuring the inhabitants that it is still safely locked away. Could the clock's lullaby be hiding another song designed to bring one powerless witch across time to free the thing imprisoned in the clock tower?
